What Parish Councillors do ?

Local councillors have 3 main areas of work:

Decision making

through attending meetings with other elected members.

Deciding on which activities to support, where money can be spent, what services should be delivered and what policies should be implemented

Monitoring

Councillors make sure that their decisions lead to efficient and effective services by keeping an eye on how well things are working

Getting involved locally

As local representatives, councillors have responsibilities towards their residents and local organisations. This depends on what work the councillor wants to achieve and how much time they have available. It may include:

- Attending meetings of local organisations and community groups

- Taking up issues on behalf of residents and making representations to the Borough Council

- Meeting with individual residents

What do Parish Councils do?

- Give communities a voice through representing:
- To the local police and health services
- On planning matters with principal authorities and developers (as consultees)
- To parliament and government

What do Parish Councils do?

- Improve quality of life through:
 - Local housing and infrastructure through neighbourhood plans (Radcliffe's adopted in 2017, currently under review)
 - Acting as Community Hubs
 - Funding community projects and vital services
 - Tackle loneliness – promoting social events

The role of a Parish Councillor

- Parish Councillors are collectively responsible for making Council Policy for which they are accountable to the electorate and Staff implement the lawful decisions.
- Parish Councillors are not directly involved in the day-to-day provision of services to the public and do not have any decision taking powers as individuals and do not direct staff.
- Councillors are responsible for taking the lead in representing and leading their communities.
- It is Councillors who must ensure that the council works effectively with its partners in the public, private and voluntary sectors in promoting and maintaining the economic, social and environmental well-being of the Council and local people.

Could I become a Parish Councillor?

- As a local councillor you become a voice for your community and make a real change
- Local councillors have to be residents of the area their local council serves
- Councillors spend on average about three hours a week on council work, it all depends on time available and interests
- Working as a local councillor is a completely voluntary role without remuneration
- Councillors are elected by people who live in the parish or after an election any unfilled seats may be filled by co-option
